Reasons for Allowance

Independent Claims 1,19 recite determining presence states between caller and receiver terminals and a limitation for the following:

"a caller communication terminal equipment having presence inquiring means for making an inquiry to a receiver communication terminal about a presence state of a communicating party"

The prior art of record teaches determining presence states of communicating parties. The prior art is different because the presence states are not determined through communication by caller and receiving terminals.

Independent claims 14,19 recite determining presence states between caller and receiver terminals and a limitation for the following:

"identifying presence information associated with an operator of said receiver communication terminal, said received presence information selected from a group of checks"

The prior art of record teaches determining presence states but not selected from a group of checks as recited in the limitation. New search updates revealed no other prior art of record which teaches the limitations in the context of the claims. Therefore, Claims 1-20 are indicated allowable.
